Pelahatchie's Past Preserved in the Lessel House

Special to Pelahatchie News

Tucked near the old railroad line in downtown Pelahatchie stands a structure that has quietly witnessed the town's transformation for more than a century. Known locally as the Lessel House, this historic building—once a bustling boarding house—offers a rare glimpse into Pelahatchie's past and the early days of Mississippi's railroad era.

Built in the late 1800s or early 1900s, the Lessel House originally served as a hotel for travelers arriving by train. Back when the Alabama & Vicksburg Railroad was a lifeline for commerce and communication, Pelahatchie was more than just a whistle-stop—it was a place of opportunity. For salesmen, laborers, and visitors passing through, the Lessel House provided food, rest, and a sense of familiarity in an unfamiliar place.

The building's location near Railroad Street and Brooks Avenue placed it squarely in the middle of the town's activity. Trains would bring passengers, goods, and news from across the region, and the boarding house thrived as a result. At its peak, it was said to be one of the busiest buildings in town.

Special to Pelahatchie News

In 1987, the Lessel House was added to the National Register of Historic Places, officially recognized for its role in Pelahatchie's commercial and transportation development. Though time has weathered its walls, the building remains one of the oldest surviving structures tied to the town's railroad heritage.

While the house no longer operates as a hotel, its legacy continues. It stands today as a private property, its quiet presence a reminder of a time when railroads drove the economy and local inns were essential links in the chain of Southern commerce. Residents often recall stories passed down from grandparents who remembered the steady stream of travelers coming and going, their footsteps echoing on the wooden floors.

Local historians and those passionate about preserving Pelahatchie's heritage have expressed hope that the building might one day be restored or repurposed, preserving it not just as a relic, but as a living part of the town's story. In a place like Pelahatchie—where tradition runs deep and change comes slowly—structures like the Lessel House carry more than historical value. They hold the memories of a community shaped by movement, growth, and resilience.

As Pelahatchie continues to move forward, the Lessel House remains a symbol of where it's been. Weathered but standing, quiet but remembered, it tells a story that still belongs to the people who call this small Mississippi town home.

Warren retires from Board after 40 years of service

By Susie A. Wolfe

On Saturday, July 12, 2025, a reception was held at the Knox Ross Community Center to honor Alderwoman Margie Warren for her forty years of service to Ward Three in Pelahatchie.

After Mayor Karl VanHorn gave her a plaque from the town, State Senator Brian Rhodes, District 36, read a proclamation highlighting Mrs. Warren's lasting impact for Pelahatchie that was signed by Lt. Governor Delbert Hosemann.

Known for her love of children and as the MAIS statistician for East Rankin Academy basketball games, "Miss Margie" or "Granny" has been a mentor and encourager for kids around town.

She has also helped with Vacation Bible School at Pelahatchie Baptist Church for many years.

"I love this town, and most of all, I love these children in this town," said Warren to the gathered crowd, "They are just like mine."

"I'm here if you need me," She continued saying, "You just have to call me. I will do what I can as long as [Mayor] Karl [VanHorn] lets me."

Many townsfolk, supporters, and family showed up to wish Warren a happy retirement including former Mayor Knox Ross and Rankin County Supervisor Steve Gaines. The town hosted a buffet with a cake to celebrate.

PHS Welcomes Alumni Chance White as New School Resource Officer

Special to Pelahatchie News

Pelahatchie High School is proud to welcome a familiar face back home as Chance White steps into the role of School Resource Officer (SRO). A graduate of Pelahatchie High School himself, White brings not only professional experience in law enforcement but a deep-rooted connection to our school and community.

For White, this new position is more than just a job; it's a homecoming. "It's funny you asked," he shared. "I walked the halls today, and so many memories came flooding back. I would say my fondest memories are from football and baseball. Coach Bill Ward and the late great Johnny Bishop, my uncle, had a huge impact on growing and overcoming challenges not only in sports, but in life."

Last week, White joined other SROs from across the state at the 2025 Mississippi Association of School Resource Officers Conference. There, he worked alongside the Rankin County School District Law Enforcement team to enhance his skills and strengthen his commitment to school safety and professionalism. This training underscores White's dedication to ensuring Pelahatchie High remains a safe, supported, and successful environment for all students.

White's decision to return to Pelahatchie is rooted in love for his hometown and family. "My family brings me home. I'm from Pelahatchie, live here, and I'm raising my kids here," he said. "Who doesn't want a job where they can see their babies every day? Watch them learn in the same classrooms as you did? Thankfully, they are all smarter than myself!"

When asked what he looks forward to most, White responded with the heart of a true Chief: "Building positive relationships with students, staff, and parents of Pelahatchie. Having a positive impact on our community. Making sure to create the safest possible learning environment for our students and staff."

We are truly blessed to have White on campus. His leadership, passion for Pelahatchie, and commitment to our students make him an invaluable addition to our Tribe. Welcome home, Officer White!

PHS welcomes students back to business, back to school

Special to Pelahatchie News

*By Guest Columnist Vonnelle
Anderson, Head Principal,
Pelahatchie High School*

A brand-new school year is here — a fresh start, a blank page, and a chance to write your own success story. Whether you're stepping into high school for the first time or preparing to cross the graduation stage, this year is full of potential, and you hold the pen.

We are excited to have you return and look forward to a successful year filled with academic achievement, athletic excellence, and meaningful extracurricular opportunities.

There will be challenges, but there will also be opportunities — to learn, grow, connect, and lead. Don't be afraid to set big goals and chase them with purpose. Show up. Work hard. Be kind. And most importantly, believe in your ability to make this your best year yet.

This year, our theme is "Unfinished Business." We are picking up where we left off — ready to grow, to improve, and to reach new heights together.

As we begin, I want to share a few important reminders:

- Attendance matters. Our classes are 96 minutes long. When a student misses just one day, that's 384 minutes — over six hours — of valuable instruction lost. Every minute counts.
- Tardies matter too. Arriving on time sets the tone for a successful day. Please help ensure students are at school and in class promptly each morning.

We have great plans in place and are eager to work alongside our students, families, and community partners to make this a year to remember. Together, we can ensure all students reach their full potential.

Let's get to work! We have unfinished business — dreams to reach, goals to crush, and a legacy to build. Let's rise to the challenge and make this year one to remember.

Pelahatchie HS welcomes new teachers for 2025-26

Special to Pelahatchie News

Pelahatchie High School (PHS) is thrilled to welcome new teachers for the 2025–2026 school year. From the classroom to the field, these passionate educators and coaches are bringing fresh energy, big goals, and a heart for students. Our Tribe is growing stronger, and we couldn’t be more excited. As we count down the days until the first bell rings, we’re gearing up for another incredible year of learning, leading, and living out what it means to be a Chief. Help everyone at the school to give a warm Pelahatchie welcome to the newest members of the PHS family.

A word from Michael Gregory: I'm incredibly excited to become a part of the Pelahatchie High School family and experience all the great things happening here. Becoming a Chief means joining a tradition of pride, growth, and community-and I'm honored to be a part of that. My 'why' is simple: I want to make a difference in the future by making a positive impact on students today. I believe in the power of relationships, hard work, and creating an environment where students feel seen, supported, and inspired to reach their full potential.

A word from Meia Hampton: Education is the cornerstone for personal development, society advancement, and a brighter future. It enables individuals to think critically, act ethically, and make important contributions to their communities. Education creates opportunities, breaks poverty cycles, and inspires innovation. It enables people to discover their passions, develop essential skills, and gain confidence in an ever-changing world. At its foundation, education is about more than just learning knowledge; it is about shaping lives, developing potential, and building a more just and informed society.

A word from Kramer Sowell: The agriculture educators' creed says, "I am agricultural educator by choice, not by chance." I chose this profession so that I might be able to make a positive difference in my students lives, just like my ag teachers did in mine.

A word from Mark Edwards: I am thrilled to join the Pelahatchie family. I am eager to work alongside a great team of educators and meet all the students. My 'why' and goal as a teacher is to build positive relationships with as many students as possible. I am excited to serve and support Chief Nation each day this school year!

A word from Kavy Bui: I've always loved math and helping my classmates or tutoring younger students in math. I was told from an early age that I made math easier to understand when helping friends that struggled. I like seeing the "light bulb moment" when a student figures something out. It's the best.

A word from Brittany Thrash: I wanted to get into education to support students of all abilities in reaching their full potential. I hope to help to create an inclusive environment where every child feels seen, valued, and capable of success.

Cross Roads starts new GriefShare series; Adds Loss of Spouse session

Special to Pelahatchie News

Cross Roads Baptist Church (CRBC) will host the loss of a spouse session on Saturday, August 9, 2025, at 10 a.m. and the fall GriefShare series will start August 16, at 10 a.m.

No matter what the circumstances, grief is a painful, confusing process. A GriefShare group is a safe, welcoming place where people understand the difficult emotions of grief. At this 13-week support group program, you'll discover what to expect in the days ahead and what's "normal" in grief. Since there are no neat, orderly stages of grief, you'll learn helpful ways of coping with grief, in all its unpredictability—and gain solid support each step of the way.

At each weekly meeting starting August 9, you will view a video featuring respected counselors, pastors, and healthcare professionals on grief-related topics, plus you'll hear relatable personal stories of grief. After that is a small-group discussion to allow people time to talk, share support, and personally apply what they learned on the video. Everyone will receive a book to take home filled with valuable exercises for navigating their personal grieving process.

Topics include how to manage grief-related emotions such as loneliness, anxiety, sadness, anger, and regret; how to cope with the changes in your life and relationships; and how to recognize what's normal in grief and what to do if you feel stuck or hopeless.

GriefShare group participants have repeatedly shared that they feel comforted and encouraged by being in a place where people truly understand what they're going through and that they feel a sense of relief when they're given guidance and tips on how to deal with the daily challenges.

Your bereavement experience may be recent or not so recent. No matter how long it's been, this is an opportunity to be around people who understand what you are feeling.

If you have experienced the death of a family member or friend, you are invited to attend. For more details, and to find and register for a group, visit griefshare.org. Or contact JoAnn Brown at CRBC at 601-942-4439.

The history of the American chestnut tree in the South

By Doug Carter, Rankin County Extension Agent

Special to Pelahatchie News

Recently, I visited with a local landowner, who is an avid deer hunter. He discussed with me about planting hybrid chestnut trees for deer. The American chestnut once dominated portions of the eastern U.S. forest. The tree was among the largest and fastest growing trees in the forest. Because it could grow so rapidly and attain huge sizes, the American chestnut was often an outstanding feature in both urban and rural landscapes.

American chestnut trees were once the mighty giants of America's eastern forests, these trees reached heights as great as 100 feet tall and trunk diameter over 6 feet wide. Fast growing, rot-resistant, straight-grained, and prolific nut producers, these trees had many exceptional qualities. An ideal building and furniture wood, chestnut lumber was a vital part of the economy.

In colonial times, chestnut wood was the preferred wood for log cabins foundations, fence post, flooring, and caskets. Later, railroad ties, and both telephone and telegraph poles were made from chestnut, many of which are still in use today.

What many people in Mississippi don't realize is that the American chestnut was once found along the east-central part of the state, from Corinth, MS to south of Hattiesburg, MS. This population represented the extreme western part of the chestnut's natural range.

Chestnuts fed billions, from insects to birds and mammals, and was a significant contributor to rural agricultural economics. At one time nut-ripening and gathering nearly coincided with the holiday season. Nineteenth century newspapers often featured articles about railroad cars overflowing with chestnuts to be sold fresh or roasted in major cities.

All of this began to change around 1904 when a fungus was accidentally moved from Asia to New York. The fungus known as the chestnut blight, ran unchecked through the vast range of the American chestnut that covered over 200 million acres of the eastern United States. By the late 1950s an estimated 4 billion American chestnut trees were reduced to snags and stumps. This fungus attacks chestnut with toxins, including oxalate, which creates cankers and kills the tree by disrupting the flow of water and nutrients to its branches and stems.

These trees were not ready to give up the fight and have continued to spout for stumps only to have the growing trees live for a short period of time before again dying back. The blight cannot kill the underground root system as the pathogen is unable to compete with the soil microorganisms. Stump sprouts grow vigorously in cutover or undisturbed sites where there is plenty of sunlight, but inevitably succumb to the blight. The cycle of death and rebirth has kept the species alive.

The American chestnut remains a beloved part of many communities and family histories. Today's volunteers in restoration efforts carry on the legacy of generations who fought to save the species. The American chestnut is firmly etched in our cultural memory.

Southern Pine Offers Tips to Help Members Lower Summer Electric Bills

Special to Pelahatchie News

With extreme summer temperatures gripping Mississippi, Southern Pine Electric is encouraging members to take simple steps to reduce their energy use and keep electric bills manageable during the hottest part of the year.

“When temperatures soar into the 90s and 100s, it’s not just uncomfortable—it drives up energy use across our entire service area,” said Kristen Thorne, Director of Member Services at Southern Pine Electric. “Air conditioners are running harder and longer, and for many families, that means higher bills. We want to help our members stay safe, stay cool, and stay in control of their energy costs.”

Southern Pine is offering practical, no-cost and low-cost tips for reducing usage during peak demand times—typically from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m.—and easing the strain on both wallets and the electric system:

- Set thermostats to 78 degrees or higher when home and even higher when away.
- Use ceiling fans to circulate air, but turn them off when leaving a room.

- Close blinds and curtains to block direct sunlight, especially during the hottest hours of the day.
- Avoid indoor cooking during peak hours. Instead, consider using an outdoor grill or small appliances like air fryers, microwaves, or slow cookers.
- Delay running heat-producing appliances like dishwashers and clothes dryers until later in the evening.
- Change air filters regularly and service air conditioning systems for maximum efficiency.

- Download and use the free MyPower app to monitor daily use and set alerts to avoid billing surprises.

“Members can take charge of their energy use and see the difference on their bills,” Thorne said. “These are easy steps anyone can take, and they really add up—not just for your home, but for the entire cooperative system.”

Southern Pine Electric encourages members to visit www.southernpine.coop for more energy-saving ideas and to access the MyPower usage monitoring tool. Members may also contact the cooperative to schedule a free home energy audit.

“Mississippi summers are tough,” Thorne added. “But with a little planning and a few smart habits, we can all stay cooler and save money while we do it.”

Southern Pine Electric is a member-owned, not-for-profit cooperative that distributes electricity to more than 70,000 members in 11 counties in central and south Mississippi. Headquartered in Taylorsville, Southern Pine has offices in Brandon, Newton, Hattiesburg and New Hebron.

Pastor's Perspective: You want me to surrender?

By Guest Columnist Spencer Sullivan,
Pastor, Pelahatchie Baptist

Special to
Pelahatchie News

I don't know how it is for you, but sometimes it's hard for me to believe 2020 was 5 years ago. It was a very difficult time for many, and it was an incredibly frustrating time for all of us. The virus had significant implications for those that endured serious cases. For those that were largely unaffected physically by the virus, the worst part of the Covid-19 experience was the isolation. For months, we could barely leave our houses. School was exclusively done online. For those that were able to continue working, that also was limited to what could be done through an internet connection. One business that thrived during this season was Zoom Communications. Through Zoom and other like software programs, people are able to communicate 'face to face' through video conference technology. During that season of life, many came to realize that this technology is a wonderful substitute when in-person gathering together is impossible. But it is a substitute. It's still not close to the same thing as being in the physical presence of people. Nothing can replace being in the same place, especially with those we love to spend time with. Presence is powerful.

King David certainly realized this. He prioritized presence, especially the presence of God. In Psalm 27 he made a remarkable statement: "One thing have I asked of the Lord, that will I seek after: that I may dwelt in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to gaze upon the beauty of the Lord and to inquire in His temple." He is essentially saying, if I have only one thing that I can request of God, this is it. I want to be with God all the days of my life. Why do you think this was David's one request? God certainly isn't a genie in a bottle, but He is all powerful and the source of every good thing. But, David didn't ask Him for wealth or power. He didn't ask for romantic love. He didn't ask for health and a long life. More than anything else, He just wanted to be with God; He wanted to always be in His presence. Why? In the rest of the psalm, David talks about the valuable effects that result from pursuing the presence of God.

God's presence implies His protection, which then eliminates fear and produces confidence. In this psalm, David speaks with immense confidence as it relates to any threat posed by his enemies. He does so because God is his stronghold and safe place. In addition, as David pursued God's presence, he was after joy and satisfaction. This is what Adam and Eve experienced in God's presence before sin entered and necessitated a separation between them and the unique presence they previously enjoyed. This kind of presence is what Jesus died to restore and that those who repent and believe will one day experience for eternity. David sought after and experienced joy and satisfaction as he gazed upon the beauty and glory of the Lord. Finally, David found that God's presence produces peace and security. In this life, there is no greater sense of peace and security than the love and protection provided by a loving mom and dad. David wrote that even if his own mother and father abandoned him, the Lord would take him in.

David experienced confidence, joy, satisfaction, peace, and security all through his pursuit of God's presence. If you had one request of God, would it match David's? Within Psalm 27, God Himself speaks. He says, "Seek My face." David's response is "Your face, Lord, do I seek." God says to you and me today: "Seek My face." What is your response to this call? Will you seek His face and His presence and then experience these same realities the way that David did? May our response be "Your face, Lord, do I seek!"

Community Churches Support Educators with Back-to-School Meals

By Shaun McInnish, City Beat Writer

As the 2025–2026 school year kicks off, Pelahatchie school staff were met with an extraordinary show of support from local churches, who provided meals and encouragement throughout the final days of teacher planning.

On Monday, The Church at Shiloh treated staff to a generous BBQ lunch, complete with homemade desserts. The meal served as a welcome boost during a busy week of preparation.

Tuesday brought another act of kindness as Pelahatchie Baptist Church hosted school staff for lunch. The church has long been a consistent supporter of the district, and its continued hospitality helped staff feel appreciated and uplifted heading into the school year.

The week of support concluded Wednesday with a lunch provided by Crossroads Baptist Church. As teachers finalized classroom setups and prepared for students to arrive, the meal marked a moment of community connection and gratitude.

The shared meals gave staff a chance to come together, recharge, and reflect on the work ahead. With the first day of school just around the corner, the encouragement and generosity from these churches have helped set a positive tone for the year.

Pelahatchie schools begin the new academic year with a strong sense of community backing, thanks to the care and commitment of local faith partners.
